FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

February 1, 2021

Administrative Controls Management, Inc. (ACM)'s ownership team announced the promotions of Jim Krebs to Executive Vice President and Anthony Woodrich to Senior Vice President. In addition, they were also pleased to welcome Joe Kinchen into the role of Vice President and Owner, and Stephanie Hesson to Senior Director of Human Resources. The year 2020 was significant in planning and executing ACM's leadership transition with the expansion of its team.

Joe has been part of the ACM team for the past 9 years working as a project controls manager for multi-million dollar projects in the manufacturing, chemical, and energy industries. He has supported and managed numerous projects and portfolios in Asia, North and South America, and Europe; and will continue his role as regional director for Charlotte, North Carolina and Columbus, Ohio. Joe will also continue working with the other owners in developing and starting up new clients in Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Georgia, and Richmond, Virginia.

Stephanie has been part of the ACM team for over 25 years managing and supervising administrative personnel, the administration of ACM's HR department and recruiting process, as well as coordinating training seminars and performing reviews and updates of ACM's manuals and seminars. She also assists in the development and refinement project management processes. ACM is extraordinarily fortunate to have Stephanie who is an integral part of ACM's management team.
